Hello Mr. Samolis

Here are a separate series of pictures proving that the landlord knowingly violated the law and put my health at jeopardy deliberately. This was uncalled for, and it has caused severe symptoms in me that at first I was not aware of for at least 2 years, because I was being told the blistering and dusts were not lead.

There are many: So videos I have to capture pictures from because the attachments were too large to send and was getting rejected. I have the original tapes.

There are two vents exactly where he (b) (6) landlord) is sweeping the dust over, deliberately after I told the lawyer and he was asked to leave until I move. This is a video clip. I was sitting there.

This is human waste coming from out of the sewage pipes from the basement floor that has been there for over a year.

Here is a returned check. I was paid in full through all July 2012.

Also, I got permission from them to break the lease as well.

Here is the official response from my supervisor below. If you go to findlaw.com & type "security deposit law" in the search engine you should see your situation. Small claims court (or magistrate). He has to give you an itemized deduction list & refund within a limited amount of time if I understand the several articles I read there.

Hi,

No, there are no additional violations that we can add for this situation.

Thanks,

Annie

Hello:

I was wondering if you notified the landlord yet? He did hear me talking to you as I was calling while he was doing the renovations. He claimed he would give me my security deposit. I owed him nothing. Now he is refusing to do so after being given my address twice. I believe he is doing this in retaliation for my reporting what he did to me to the EPA Department.

Are there additional charges for retaliation for a person filing a truthful complaint to the EPA?

Thanks
